SETTING UP NEW COURSES/LOCATIONS

Courses offered through the ECCA program are located within schools where there is established and sustained interest, available space and qualified and experienced instructors.

To establish new programs in your school, the ECCA program can assist school communities in some of the following ways:

- Determine available and suitable space for requested new programs and courses
- Provide a survey to assess the level of interest for new courses/locations
- Search for experienced, qualified and available instructional staff

Where space, sufficient fee-paying registrations and suitable instructional staff are available, new programs can be established during the school year, for both short and on-going full-year programs. Typically, new programs can be arranged to commence the following school term.
